THE GAME WITH YALK. The game between Yale and the Y. M. C. Al-ready parties have been arranged to attend, and the Yale men in the city will be there in full force. There is a sort of a "go" about a college contest that has an especial attraction in it which never fails to draw. The game is looked forward to as one of the events of the opening of the outdoor season in this city. Some envious person has taken the trouble to circulate the report that the team which Yale will play against the Y. M. C. A. on Friday next is not the first team of the college. This malicious misstatement is entirely and satisfactorily refuted by a letter which Manager Wells of the Y. M. C. A. has received from N. H. Swayne, the manager of the Yale nine. The letter reads as follows:

Though it has not been definitely decided, it can be stated with a certain amount of assurance that the Columbia Athletic Club will obtain a long lease on the Van Ness property and that they will locate their new athletic grounds at that place. The property includes about five acres of ground

Mulleable Giass a Possibility.

From American Carpet and Uphoistery Trade.

Malleable Glass a Possibility. From American Carpet and Uphoistery Trade Among the stories which have floated down to us from antiquity is one told by Tacitus as THOMAS DOWLING & SON, Auctioneers.

It is said, discovered the act of tempering glass so as to render it malleable, and made a large was which he took to the court and exhibited before the emperor, expecting to receive a hand-some reward for his ingenuity. He proved the temper of his vase by throwing it violently on he stone floor, then taking out his hanner, beat it into the former shape. Instead of bestowing a reward, the emperor ordered him to be just to death, alleging that such a discovery would diminish the value of precious metals. The story is probably apocryphal, as perhaps is that other of six malleable glass mirrors sent from the Shah of Persia to Spain in 1610, but both are indications that the subject of glass tempering has long engaged the attention of inventors. During the hast half century much progress has been made in tempering glass, and, when desired, it is now made much tougher than the glass workers of former times were able to produce. So there is no reason to doubt that malleable glass is among the possibilities of the near future.

Dispatches from Indian territory indicate an indications. A second many progress has been made in tempering glass, and shown a first that other of six more made to produce. So there is no reason to doubt that malleable glass is among the possibilities of the near future.

Dispatches from Indian territory indicate an indian uprising imminent among the Kiowas, Otoes and Missouries.
